

When a loved one needs nursing home care, you want to be sure they feel your support.

With CarePages, you receive a free, private Web page dedicated to their care.

"My dad is a picky eater, so when he was admitted to a nursing home, I was concerned that he wouldn't get enough of the foods he likes. Thanks to CarePages, I receive messages about menu changes and can check in with the staff about how he's eating."

CarePages makes communication easy and provides peace of mind.

With CarePages, you can stay connected with messages about care, stories of your latest visit, and greetings from your circle of friends and family.

Your CarePage lets you:

- ▶ Communicate with staff through Private Messages. You hear about events – big and small – in your loved one's life and feel confident that your loved one is well cared for.
- ▶ Build a community of support for your loved one through Updates. It's a private place for sharing stories, information, and photos with friends and family.
- ▶ Receive Community Messages and retain a record of your loved one's stay. CarePage postings, updates and messages are automatically saved.

Communicate Private Messages

"In answer to your question, your mother has been very active since your last visit. In addition to her regular physical therapy, she's taking regular walks around the courtyard. This bodes very well for her continued mobility."

Share Updates

"Mom's found a group of friends who love knitting as much as she does. They get together nearly every afternoon. During my last visit, I joined in, and they all had a good time giving me pointers."

Receive Community Messages

"Dear Aunt Tonya - John's gotten time off, so I'm happy to say that we'll be in for a visit next week. We're really excited to see you. Anna says the weather has been lovely there, so maybe we can sit outside in the garden."
